CARTER COUNTY COURTESIES.

A Sample Correspondent—Some Answers to Legal Interrogatories.

The following communication appeared in a recent impression of The Grayson Bugle, which the Editor regards as a legal document, as the writer is a lawyer. It is printed word for word and letter for letter, as the law permits no changes or alterations in its form:

"Wesley Hill, Carter Co. Ky.
"February 28 1892.

"Mr. Editor of the Grayson Bugle,
Dear Sir: I see in your paper dated Feb. 25 92 a communication from James F. Jordan and A. N. McGlone. I wish to say that the fool that let that letter go as a law report and he is a subject for a County Jail and his proper home would be the Lunatic Asylum, or he is a Comiser Rober. It is true that McGlone shot at Jordan, but Jordan assaulted him with a knife before the shooting took place. McGlone swore he did the shooting in self defense and there was no profit offered to the County Jail. The McGlone family is good citizens and are a law abiding people, as for the other I will let it for opinions.

"Will you please give this letter Room in your Columns and oblige a friend.

THOS. P. COOPER.

In this connection a friend informs us that he was present at a session of Court in Carter where six candidates—four of whom were Magistrates—were being examined for license to practice law.

Among the questions was—
"If a man commits suicide, what should be done?"

"Why, he ought to be made to take it and raise it."

Another question was—
"If a woman gives birth to a child thirteen months after the death of her husband, is the child legitimate?"

One of the 'Squires' was repeatedly prompt and positive on this point, by replying, "Yes, sir; yes, sir."

"You're a d-d liar," was the Examiner's response, and the interrogator and interrogated retired for refreshments.

THE GIRLS' POLY.

A Successful Working Woman's Club in the British Capital.

Perhaps the most complete and practically successful working girls' club that has yet been organized, says Scribner's Magazine, is one that has been provided through the generosity of a good man and his devoted wife. It is in London, at the West End, in Langham place, just beyond Regents street, adjoining the well-known Langham hotel. It is commonly known as the "Girls' Poly," to distinguish it from an institution with which it is closely allied, the Young Men's Polytechnic Institute, which is universally known among young people in London as the "Poly." The more precise name of the club in question is the Young Women's Institute. The fees for institute membership are very small—eighteen pence per quarter or five shillings ($1.25) per year. The establishment is open in all its parts for the benefit of the members from 6:30 to 10 o'clock in the evenings. The membership fee gives free use of sitting-rooms, library, reading and music rooms, game-rooms, recreation grounds and numerous other advantages, and also entitles the fortunate young women to admission at low tuition rates to an immense range of classes and entertainments. The purely club features of the place are highly prized by the girls. It is no small thing for them to have a bright, cheerful establishment that they regard as their own, where they may resort in the evenings, and in connection with which they have access to so much that is diverting and instructive. It is needless to emphasize the importance of such a privilege to anyone who knows how the average young workingmen and women of our great cities are obliged to live. In the refreshment rooms the member may procure her cup of tea and light lunch, at a cost decidedly less than elsewhere, and for a year or more past there has been served in the spacious dining-room an excellent and substantial dinner, in courses, at sixpence. For fourpence a very good but less bountiful dinner may be had by the more economical young women of business. These privileges are, of course, limited to members. The institute dining-rooms are vastly more pleasant than the cheap restaurants or lunch-rooms to which the girls might otherwise be compelled to resort, and the food at the institute is incomparably better in quality and cheaper in price. All the influences of the place are homelike, wholesome and improving. There seems to be a tacit understanding among the young women who meet in these agreeable quarters that they must in their best behavior—must "live up to their blue china," so to speak.

JONATHAN ABROAD.

His Free and Easy Way, But He Can't Be Fooled—His Song Froid.

What the average American abroad is most conspicuous for is the commission of small sins. Instead of wondering that the English criticize us, we ought to wonder rather that their hospitality was not exhausted long ago for really the behavior of some of our people abroad would try the patience of the angels in the seventh heaven. Never by any chance do they seem to do the right thing except in the wrong way; and one's head spins in ransacking the code to discover what is the spring of their action. The free-and-easy, go-as-you-please, mebbe-we-will way in which they accept an invitation to dinner—that sacred function—is appalling. They utterly disregard the fact that time, money, pains, courtesy and brains have been expended to give them a delightful dinner (and I never ate a poor one in all my English experience), and arrive too early or too late or not at all, as it suits them, upsetting the host's arrangements, the hostess' temper and making of themselves table talk for nine days after.

A leading London merchant once said to me: "An American lady will come here to buy, and nothing but the very best will satisfy her. real velvet, real lace, real silk, perfect fit and exclusive style; no cotton 'mixtures,' no 'sham' skirts, only noble material from start to finish. An English lady will come in and whatever else, the thing she buys must be the lowest for credit or cash. I remember the time when an English lady would bring a carriageful of money to buy a handful of lace; now she brings a handful of money to buy a carriageful of lace, and is perfectly contented to dress herself in any wretched imitation. English women all buy this stuff" (the speaker contemptuously indicated some horrid "coffee lace"); "we can't sell that rubbish to an American, she would not touch it with her parasol. Indeed, in one part in Spain the lace trade has died, owing to the degeneration in taste of English women who once supported this fabric."

The American cannot pour tea and cream and sugar to perfection, says the Jewish Messenger, and he may err in fifty details, but when the situation arrives that calls for the very genius of good breeding, the American shines; then to the rescue of some awful embarrassment or fiasco he comes with his kindness of heart, and love, the true revealer in a flash of light inspires him to the action or the word that gives him rank with Bayard and Saint Francois de Sales.

Flaxseed in the Eye.

Putting a flaxseed under the lid of the eye to get out a cinder which has accidentally lodged there may seem a curious method of abolishing a nuisance, but is nevertheless quite effective. After the seed has been moistened by the secretions of the eye it exudes a mucus, which not only alleviates the irritation of a foreign body, but also frequently surrounds it and prevents pain from the motion of the eyeball against the cinder and ultimately assists in its removal. The remedy may seem novel to many persons, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, but there are commercial travelers in this city who never start on a journey without a pinch of flaxseed somewhere in their baggage where it can be easily reached in case of an accidental cinder in the course of a railway journey.
